Dear Vineet Kumar,

The proof of your article pnas.2306412121 is ready for download. Please note that this is your ONLY opportunity to correct errors in your article prior to publication. Page proofs should be checked carefully against the manuscript, and corrections should be returned as soon as possible. Please limit alterations to errors and changes impacting the scientific accuracy. Rephrasing of sentences is not permitted at this stage and extensive or substantive changes are subject to editorial review and may incur additional charges. Proof corrections should be returned within 48 hours to ensure the fastest publication speed for your article. Note that PNAS policy and the journal's rapid production schedule cannot accommodate multiple proof review cycles.

For applicable article types, if you submitted supporting information (SI), such as appendices, datasets, movies, and "Other Supporting Information Files" note that they have not been edited and are available for review in the noncomposed SI section of the PNAS Smart Proof. If changes to the SI files are necessary, please upload an explanation of your changes and a revised SI file(s) that appears exactly as you would like it to be published online, without any annotations.

Corrections requested after online publication will be considered and processed as a formal, published Erratum statement.

To review and edit your proof, please use the following link. If applicable, please also review your SI and provide a revised file if necessary. Replacement files, such as figures and/or SI, should be provided via the attachment feature in the comment panel. If needed, there are instructions and contacts who can provide help and technical support; this information is available on the landing page:
